The moon put Mars completely out of sight and while there were some clouds during the important event they while there were some clouds during the important event, they were not continuous and a fairly good view could be had, especially when Mars got away from the hide and seek game. Mars disappeared at the left side of the moon as one looked at it and reappeared directly opposite. The fast that it was visible to the moon as one looked at the fast of the moon as one looked at the moon as one looked at it and re-appeared directly opposite. The fact that it was visible to the naked eye caused a more general interest in the eclipse. Many looked for the planet to eclipse the moon and others were dis-appointed because the moon was not totally dark and some disastisfaction totally dark, and some dissatisfaction existed until the real state of affairs was learned,
